

Chicago Style Practice

- Chicago offers two systems of source citation. This tutorial explains how to use:
  - The "Author-Date" system
  - The "Notes and Bibliography" system
  - Both systems
- Chicago's "Notes and Bibliography" system uses footnotes or endnotes instead of the in-text parenthetical citations used in other citation formats.
  - True
  - False
- In Chicago style, Note citations differ from Bibliography citations in that (circle all that apply)
  - They use different forms of punctuation
  - The author's first and last names are not listed in the same order
  - Book and journal titles are italicized in the Bibliography, but not in a Note.
  - A & B
  - A, B, & C
- An article title is capitalized in _____ style for Chicago citations.
  - Sentence
  - Reference
  - Headline
  - Mixed
- When citing an online journal article, a DOI or permalink should be included if available.
